Didsbury Invaded

Didsbury had a good chance on Wednesday noon last to welcome the stranger within her gates, and needless to say made the best of the opportunity the occasion being the visit of the 100,000 club of Calgary.

The train was a few minutes ahead of time which accounts for the fact that the Board of Trade and Council were a little behind in giving the welcome on the depot that was intended. However, after the visitors had replenished the inner man by the assistance of the hotels and restaurants who were fully prepared for them the members of the Board, Council and several citizens took them in hand and gave them a free ride around town and onto the Butte where the visitors had a splendid view of the surrounding country. The train left sharp on time and they expressed themselves well pleased with the reception Didsbury accorded them. The Board of Trade and Council wish to thank the proprietors of the livery barns and townspeople who voluntarily assisted the conveyances for the occasion.

STORM FIEND AT WORK

ENGLAND VISITED BY SEVERE AND DEVASTATING STORM.

Sudden Change From Spring Back to Winter—Land and Sea Casualties—Due to Gale and Snow—Coast Strawn With Wrecks—Entire Kingdom Swept From End to End—The Worst For Years.

From bright sunny and springlike weather, with the parks and gardens gay with snowdrops and crocuses, England has this week been plunged back to the depths of winter with one of the worst and most devastating storms ever experienced throughout the United Kingdom.

Widespread havoc has been caused on the land, with a considerable number of casualties, while all round these islands the coast is strewn with wrecked and disabled vessels. Lifeboats everywhere have had a busy time.

The storm has been accompanied by heavy rains in some parts and by blinding snow in others. Even London has witnessed another heavy snowfall, though not quite so bad as the last, when traffic was so seriously interfered with.

The wind at one time reached a velocity estimated at from eighty to one hundred miles an hour, tearing the roofs and tossing the chimney pots about in all directions. The entire roof of one building, carrying with it a mass of brick coping, was thrown into Fleet street and some people were hurt. It is marvellous that any escaped with only a fright; still more marvellous nobody was killed.

The bank of the River company had to be guarded by the police, owing to fear that the building would totally collapse so badly damaged by the storm. The roof had crashed through the first floor with tremendous force and the building was a total wreck, all the furniture being smashed.

Advertisement boards were treated like sheets of cardboard, plate glass windows were blown inside the shops with, of course, serious effects upon the goods.

A remarkable feature of the storm is that it has not been confined to the country merely, but has swept the entire United Kingdom north, south, east and west. If the damage could be reckoned up it would be enormous; almost as bad as if an earthquake had been at work.

KILLS A LARGE WOLF.

Hunter With Dog—Encounter, But Is Badly Scratched.

Frank Tuller, employed on the Edgewood estate of F. S. Plerson, is a lucky man. He has two dogs did not bear charmed lives. They are victims of a fifty-pound wildcat, while Tuller is nursing several scratches received in an encounter with the brute.

Now, Tuller did not think there was anything in the state that could tackle these dogs and get away with it. But he had reckoned without his host. A plain, common, ordinary, every day wildcat would have been killed, but this was not one of the garden variety. This was a "beast." He weighed 50 pounds, and every ounce spelled fight.

Thus the dogs had attempted to bite off more than they could chew, and before Tuller could yell "Jack Robinson" or any other old name his pets were in the "hazardous" class.

Then it was up to Tuller. He had his gun with him, and at first it looked an easy matter to "shoot the brute." But his general plan of the dogs. But Mr. Wildcat did not give his adversary a chance to shoot.

With one pounce he was on his man. Then began the fight for life. Mr. Tuller has some sense on the spot, and the hero always came off victorious. It was this knowledge of the sequence of events that kept his courage screwed to the sticking point.

For the wildcat was doing all sorts of odd things with his clothes and his skin. Now and then the paws would get a little deeper than the cuticle and there would come with them a bit of flesh.

After many minutes, each of which seemed an hour, the hunter backed off clear, aimed, and fired. Then he took the dead cat to his home.

"No," he said; "I have never been able to keep a dog."

"And why not?" It was his sympathetic next door neighbor who inquired.

HEALTH NOTES FOR AUGUST.

August is the month of internal catarrhs. The mucous membranes, especially of the bowels, are very liable to congestion, causing summer complaint, and catarrh of the bowels and other internal organs. Peppine is an excellent remedy for all these conditions.

Unhappy Speech

"That speech was ill-advised," said a legislator, referring to a colleague's oration of a speech that a widow made to her new husband on her honeymoon.

"Oh," she sighed, throwing herself into the man's arms, "how happy poor, dear James would be if he could only know by what an agreeable gentleman he has been replaced!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

A Coeur hunter thus describes the difference between muzzle-loading and breech-loading arms:

The Guest (after dinner)—Your wife is such a beautiful woman it's a wonder you're not jealous of her. The Host—Oh, I am! I never invite any man here that any sane woman would take a fancy to.—Tit-Bits.

DEAD HERO HONORED.

Tablet Unveiled to John Macdonnell, Brock's Gallant Aide-de-Camp.

The unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet to the memory of Lieut.-Col. L. John Macdonnell of Glangarry, Gen. Brock's gallant aide-de-camp, at the site of the old rebel battery on the face of Queenston Heights, was an event which drew a large crowd, the 41st Regiment, Brockville Rifles, to Niagara Falls, Ont., ever remembered. The regiment arrived on a recent Saturday morning and marched to Queenston Park for breakfast. They afterwards took cars on the International Railway for Queenston Heights Park. There, on the site of the old battery which played such an important part in the famous battle, the Lundy's Lane Historical Society had erected a memorial to the brave Macdonnell, but it had never been unveiled. This ceremonial was conducted by Mrs. Cruikshank, wife of Lieut.-Col. and Brigadier Cruikshank, in the presence of the visiting regiment, representatives of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society, officers of other military camps and many spectators.

When the veil was drawn aside Mrs. Fiesch, wife of the Lieut.-Col. commanding the 41st Regiment, marched forward and on behalf of the Brockville Historical Society, the British Empire, placed a wreath of ivy and immortelles upon it. The silver band of the 41st Regiment played the British and Canadian national anthems, and Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank on behalf of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society presented the tablet to the public. The inscription on the memorial reads as follows:

"Site of Redan Battery. Near this spot Lieut.-Col. John Macdonnell, 41st Regiment, British Empire, was mortally wounded 12th of October, 1812."

The wreath which was laid upon the memorial was subsequently removed to Macdonnell's Brockville monument, where it will be preserved.

They listened to the story.

After these ceremonies the visiting troops assembled in front of the Brock monument and listened to a talk on the battle of Queenston Heights by Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank, who undoubtedly knows more of the history of the war on the frontier than any other living man.

In the afternoon the officers of the 41st visited the battlefield of Lundy's Lane, where Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank delivered another of his accurate and entertaining historical military features. In connection with this visit it was recalled that it was the light company of the Regiment of the line, commanded by Capt. Clegg, which led the final charge up the hill of blood and fire on the morning of the 12th of October, 1812.

On the night of July 25, 1897, the 41st Regiment, British Empire, and many other points of historical interest were also visited by the Brockville soldiers.

REVENUE IS GOING UP.

Finance Returns Show Increase of Million Dollars a Month.

That the revenue of the Dominion is going up at the rate of about a million dollars a month is shown by the latest return of the Finance Department.

The new fiscal year is still troublesome. The year ended on March 30, 1906, but this was changed to March 31, so that the year which closed on that date in 1907 is a nine months year.

For the fiscal year ending March 31 last the total revenue was $67,969,325, compared as follows:

Customs $39,709,172
Excise 11,806,413
Postoffice 5,061,728
Public works, including railways 6,839,583
Miscellaneous 4,552,628

The revenue during April, May and June has been $23,233,238 and for purposes of comparison by adding this to the last fiscal year, the revenue for the year ending June 30 would be $91,202,563.

For the year ending June 30, 1906, the revenue was about $90,000,000, so that during the past twelve months there has been an increase of over eleven million dollars.

The expenditure for the nine months is $65,776,726, of which $51,542,161 is on current revenue and $14,234,565 on capital account, leaving a total surplus of $2,922,540. Adding a total expenditure of $10,102,016 for April, May and June, there will be a consolidated fund expenditure of $56,138,486 and capital account of $16,740,416, or a total disbursement for the twelve months of $72,878,901. This leaves a surplus of $18,990,000.

Of the $23,233,238 for the past three months, receipts for the past three months, nearly $15,000,000 is credited to customs, while during the twelve months customs contributed $50,000,000. This is just about double the total revenue raised by taxation ten years ago.

The public debt stands at $250,665,312 on June 30 last, which is a decrease since May 31 last of $2,333,248.

A Mailhead Press.

Montreal possesses one of the most curious freaks of nature ever heard of. It is a cold fourteen months old, which has a growth on its right foot, just above the hoof, which is hardly explainable. The growth has the appearance of branches of trees, and already three sprays have come out, one of which is fourteen inches long, and several others are sprouting. The queerest part of the whole thing is that the cold does not seem embarrassed by it at all, and moves about quite as freely as any other of its species.

PUT THE BLOOD
IN CONDITIONBy the Restorative Blood Forming Properties

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is weakness that causes most of our sufferings—weakness of the heart, weakness of the stomach, weakness of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

The result is feelings of languor and depression, and impaired action of the vital organs, headaches, indigestion, spells of dizziness and weakness, sleeplessness, irritability and a general rundown condition of the system.

Put the blood in good condition by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and you have a foundation for health to build on. Weakness and disease will give way to new strength and vigor, and languor and discouragement will yield to new hope and happiness.

Mr. Fergus Conn, Lily Oak, Ont., writes:—"As a result of the severe winter and an attack of la grippe, I was all run down this spring. I soon improved very much by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. My appetite is better than it has been for years, and though sixty years of age, I am able to do a man's work on the farm following a team. I believe that I owe my good health to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

"What are you doing, Miss Prissy and Tony, I mean? Aren't they awful strict?"

"I don't know. I haven't been with you long enough to find out. They're mighty nice, ain't they?"

"Oh, dreadful! And they don't like a noise, and they don't like dogs, and they don't like me. They call me the 'dog girl' I heard 'em. One time I went in there for grammar, and Tuesday and Peter followed me, and I found out they were the 'dog' room. My, but wasn't Miss Prissy mad! But you just ought to have seen that dog," she chuckled.

Bradley thought of the spotted old cloth and appreciated the situation. In the course of the conversation that followed he learned that this was an orphan, like himself and that she lived there alone with her grandmother. Suddenly the girl matched her steaming shoes out of the oven to run to the window.

"I thought I heard the gate shut," she exclaimed. "Yes, it's grandma. Praps you'd better dodger out of the other door. She'll ask questions and find out about my feet if you don't. Goodbye. I'll miss you at school tomorrow."

Bradley picked up his bundle—he had brought it in with him—and slipped out of the side door, presenting himself a moment later in the glory of his new clothes to the critical gaze of the old maids.

When Bradley started for school the next day his head was ringing with instructions from the old maids concerning his behavior and attention to his studies.

"Now, be a good boy, Bradley," said Miss Prissy.

"Yes, Bradley," said Miss Tompkins. "Remember, we expect a great deal of you. All our people have been smart scholars."

"Just as he brought into the school, he had heard some one calling and turned to see his acquaintance of yesterday, the girl next door, running to catch up, her head slipped back, and her hair and a doiled pull in her hand. Being a girl, Gus carried her moon luncheon during the winter months instead of coming home to eat it.

On the way to school they met another girl, whom Gus introduced as Clara Hopkins, a chum of hers. "She's a tip-top. I sit with her. She's got more than any checks as I have," was her recommendation.

Upstairs at the schoolhouse was a large room, with rows of double desks on each side and a wide aisle in the center. One side of the aisle was the girls' side, and the other was for the boys. Mr. Daniels sitting alone with the new scholar, asked him some questions concerning his progress in his studies and showed him where he should sit. The more advanced pupils occupied the desks at the rear of the room, and the younger ones—Bradley among them—sat in the front. Bradley's seat was an older boy than he, rather good looking, with curly hair. His name, so he whispered before school began, was Sam Hammond.

At recess Bradley went out on the playground for a little while, but he felt rather lonesome among so many strangers and so he wandered to the school room. It was empty, the teacher making his customary "constitutional" in the yard. After a few minutes Gus came bounding in.

"Why, Brad," she exclaimed, "where've you been? I've been looking for you. Why didn't you come on out?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the boy. "I don't know any of the fellows yet."

"Well, you're going to know 'em. Oh, my goodness! Winfield!"

The stub tailed dog sat panting at her feet, three inches of red tongue hanging from its mouth.

"You naughty, naughty dog!" cried Gus almost in tears. "How dare you! Go home this minute!"

"Go home, Winfield!" commanded Bradley, coughing to the rescue.

Winfield had gone along by the shell route already that morning and didn't propose to do it again. When his mistress tried to catch him he retreated to a safe distance and wagged his tail.

"Oh, what shall we do?" wailed Gus. "Dess he's most over, and if Mr. Daniels finds him here I don't know what'll happen!"

Bradley made a dash at the dog, and the latter started on the run about the room. At length they drove him out the "boys' door" at the other side. Finally, being penned in with both doors shut and thoroughly frightened, he dashed into the closet which was between the doors, and hid behind the word "no."

"Now," said Gus excitedly, "you watch that he don't get out, and I'll crawl in after him. Oh, my goodness, there's Mr. Daniels coming now!"

The evasive looks of the teacher were heard on the stairs. Bradley, in desperation, shut the closet door upon the imprisoned Winfield. Mr. Daniels stepped to the rope in the entry and gave it a pull. The bell above responded with a single note, and the scholars began to pour up the stairs.

"We will come to order," commanded the teacher. Bradley, glancing across the aisle at Gus, saw that she was as white as the whitewashed wall.

"First class in arithmetic," said Mr. Daniels, and then from the closet came a long, dismal wail. The first class in arithmetic stopped in its tracks and looked aghast. The whole school, with two exceptions, picked up its ears. The exceptions trembled.

"De-wow-wow!" came from the closet. Mr. Daniels started across the floor and opened the door.

"Whose dog is this?" he demanded sternly.

"None," answered.

"Come out of that!" commanded the teacher savagely. He reached behind the wood box and, seizing the cowering Winfield by the scruff of the neck, tossed him into the room. "Whose dog is this?" he repeated.

"None of the scholars knew whose dog it was, but none of them told.

"I asked a question!" thundered the master. "Who put that creature in the closet?"

Bradley looked at his fellow conspirator. Then he held up his hand. "I didn't," he said.

Mr. Daniels' mouth opened in surprise. New pupils did not usually begin in this way.

"You didn't?" he gasped.

"Yes, sir. He fol—meu he came into the room when Tessy, and we—I tried to put him out, and he wouldn't go."

"So you shut him in the closet. Brilliant youth! As this is your first day here, I suppose I must stretch a point and believe it was not done on purpose. If it had been any other of the scholars I should have made an example of 'em. I am surprised that you should treat your little brother" (appreciative titter from the school) "in such a manner. You may put him out."

It was easy enough to command, but no so easy to do. The dog, frightened at the crowd, backed away from Bradley apprehensively.

"Come here, Winfield," said the boy in a faint crimson. The school giggled at the sight of the teacher. "Winfield?" repeated Mr. Daniels.

"Why that name, if you please?"

"I don't know, sir."

"You don't know?"

"No, sir." And then the boy had a happy thought. "He's named after General Winfield Scott Hancock, in his role of statesman, was very much in the public eye just at this time."

Mr. Daniels' mouth opened in surprise. He had suspected the dog's real name, but he wasn't sure and being a weak man was afraid of making a mistake.

"Well, but the more volunteers only made matters worse."

At length the dog, hemmed in on both sides, hesitated in the middle of the broad aisle. Suddenly he darted toward the closet once more. Mr. Daniels leaped to intercept him, tripped, struck the stool upon which the bucket of drinking water was placed and sprawled upon the floor in the center of a miniature flood, while Winfield, leaping over him, darted through the entry and down the stairs, a shrieking maniac.

The dripping Mr. Daniels was physically cold, but mentally very warm indeed. "Checks" were distributed with liberality and two boys were "feruled" before 12 o'clock came. One of these sufferers was Bradley's seat mate, Sam Hammond.

Bradley went home alone. When the old maids asked him innumerable questions concerning how he "got along" at school he simply answered, "All right."

and gave no further "Miss Timothy" was somewhat worried at his silence and confided to her sister the fact that he had been "studying too hard." "All our people have been dreadful keen students," she said.

It was nearly 1 o'clock when the boy re-entered the school yard. As he did so a shout went up from a group near the fence.

"Here he is!" yelled one of the older boys. "Here's your bean, Gus. He won't let 'em plague his girl, you bet!"

"No," shouted Sam Hammond. "Gus's all right now, ain't she? He'll take care of her."

"Gus had a little dog: 'Is there was black a crow'—

"You shut up!" screamed Gus, breaking from the circle and stamping her foot savagely. Her face was red, and there were tears in her eyes.

"It followed her to school one day," continued the tormentor.

"What's the matter, Gus?" asked Bradley, coming up.

"Haw, haw!" laughed Sam gleefully. "I told you so, Bradley. I'll take care of her."

"Bradley Nickerson, so they say, goes a-courting' night and day; And Gusty bakes 'im his bride."

"What's the matter, Gus?" he asked mockingly.

"What is the matter?" repeated Bradley.

"None of your business," snarled Gus, who was in no mood to be friendly with any one. "You jest wait, Sam Hammond! I'll fix you! Get whipped in school! Ha! Cry baby! And she gave an exaggerated imitation of her enemy's facial contortions during the "feruling" that morning.

"Come on, Gus," interposed Clara Hopkins. "He's just worth talkin' to. Come on, I've got something to show you."

A Hopeless Case.

A Scottish parter tells a story of an old Scotchman's woe, who was "undoubtedly," without the money to buy "a drapple," "Lassie," she said to her little granddaughter, "gang round to Donald McCullum and bring me a girl. Tell him I'll pay him 'r the morning."

Back came the child with a refusal. Donald decided to part with his wife without the cash. Eager and irritated, the old woman cast about for some means of "raising the wind" and she was not long in coming up with a girl. Tell him I'll pay him 'r the morning."

"He says he manna be the bestest first," she said, "and she's a fine girl, but she's a bit of a rascal. He says he manna be the bestest first."

The angry disappointed grand mother threw up her hands and exclaimed: "Loth, loth ondy ever bear the like of this!"

She said to her granddaughter: "Loth, loth ondy ever bear the like of this!"

A Canine Shriker.

Retz, a thoroughbred Spitz, must perform the painful duty of escorting a certain neighbor home when she has been calling at our house. However, it is not without a show of reluctance that he does it. Recently our friend missed her escort, and no amount of whistling proved sufficient to recall him. This occurred several times and it was always in about the same place that Retz disappeared. One night our friend determined to discover his little game. After whistling and calling she made a pretense of going out. She stopped in a deep shadow. Around the corner the dog still crept, appeared a slinking figure. Stealthily quitting the shadows Retz crept out and peered long and anxiously up the street. As he well knew, he should have continued to conduct the lady. After this he turned shamelessly around and lit out for home.

Baby's Share of Blame.

She had been fitted for two gowns, the total cost of which was nearly $200.

"Now," she said to the saleswoman, "I want you to make me a dress."

"Certainly," was the prompt response. The customer colored deeply.

"I want you to make me a dress for my baby. I want you to make me a dress for my baby. I want you to make me a dress for my baby."

The saleswoman was used to the whim of fashion. She was not a thing was something she was a little slow in comprehending. The customer explained.

"You see," she said, "my husband is very fond of our baby, and if he sees that the bill is partly for dresses for her—well, he won't mind so much."

Should the patient die under his hands the relatives, though they rarely exercise it, have the right of putting him to death unless a special agreement has been made between him from responsibility as to consequences, while if he should decide upon yielding to his fate like a man.

INDIAN MASQUERADERS.

Dancing Masks and Blankets Used in the Northwest.

Here are some strange figures from the great Northwest. They represent the dancing masks and blankets used by the Tsimshian Indians of British Columbia in their medicine and sun dances.

Many an Indian has fainted from the exertion of wearing the heavy wooden masks and working the wires that hold the jaw. It is impossible to buy one of these masks.

Dancers in Indian curios have smaller ones made for tourists, but they are never like the originals which can only be found among the Indians.

Each design on them means a story, and the people who wear them are fortunate enough to get Chilkat blankets in the early days of British Columbia and Alaska a pair from $200 to $300 for them.

No Indian blanket is as rare or prized as the Chilkat. It is a quest that though the Indians live in the thicket of hush their blankets and masks always come out fresh when they wish to wear them for some ory or celebration. The masks in this picture are owned by one family, and this accounts for the similarity in shape and design. The colors on them are dull red, blue and black.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

It Is Best to Examine Clothes Going to Wash.

Accumulations in pockets should be looked for. Tobacco allowed to remain in a man's waistcoat pocket may cause a stain in the process of washing which irretrievably damages the waistcoat.

All pins should be carefully removed before clothes are sent to the laundry. Failure to do this may cause the ironers to bring about blood poisoning, from which fatal consequences are not infrequent.

Stains caused by tea and coffee, wine, etc., are to be removed. It is always best to mention this fact in the book, for no self-respecting laundry owner would neglect to use special agents to do so. The needful process will be undertaken at the customer's own risk only.

Lace curtains ought never to be kept up till very dirty. If sent after long exposure to strong sunlight, it is quite likely that they will almost fail to pieces when stretched.

Nor should needful mending be forgotten. It is inconsiderate to send a tattered garment to the laundry and expect it to be returned in no worse condition.

One of the sorter's principal duties is to note with a line of colored cotton every error and blot, but after a little thought it is obvious that this task can only be superciliously carried out in the presence of business. It follows, therefore, that a vast amount of mending is undertaken at the laundry which in reality should be done at home, and, however grovelling a method this may prove to customers, it makes the labors of the laundry mending unduly onerous.

Provide your own hamper, which will insure its exclusive use, and if it is scrubbed now and again at home with water absolute cleanliness will be assured.

POST CARD HOLDER.

A Useful Contrivance Easily Made by the Amateur.

This little holder is ornamental as well as useful and is quite easily made by the amateur. You require a frame, and very possibly there may be one lying about somewhere where it is required for a picture, which would admirably for the purpose. If not, simple and pretty frames can be bought for a trifling sum.

Take the wooden panel which fits at the back of the frame. If you have to get one, cut one of the exact size or, failing this, use stiff cardboard. Cover with waxed paper, cut the exact size of the wood and lay it upon it, securing it with a touch of gum here and there to prevent its slipping.

Now close a pretty piece of brocade or silk and lay this over the waxed paper, securing it with the same way. Set it to dry under a pile of books.

Now lay some strips of firm ribbon or brass across the panel to hold the letters or cards, arranging them as in the sketch or in any other way you fancy. This is not an important detail. Carry the ends of the strips over to the wrong side and secure them here and fasten them together where they cross by a pretty piece of brocade or silk.

Now slip the panel into the frame and picture in the same way as you would a picture. Paste some brown or grey paper on the back to make neat and tie a loop of ribbon through the flaps at the back to hang it by, and the card holder is complete.

A general store building is to be erected here by the farmers who feel the need of one badly. It will be for rent.

Resignation Accepted

The council met on Monday night to finish the business left over from a week ago. Mayor Scismith was in the chair and Councillors, Liesmer, Shantz and Berscht, and Solicitor Macleod were present.

Several bills were received and passed by the finance committee and ordered paid. A bill for lumber from C. Hebert & Co. was presented but as it had not been certified it was laid over till next meeting.

Councillor Maley's resignation was then taken up. As Mr. Maley had not withdrawn his resignation nor was present to state his case the council was obliged, on motion, to accept the same.

The matter of collecting the land instruments and storing them in some safe place, as well as insuring them, was taken up, and after some discussion the policeman was ordered to look after this matter at once.

Messrs. Williams and Good were present as a deputation from the board of trade to ask the council to co-operate with the board in entertaining the Hundred Thousand Club from Calgary who proposed paying Didsbury a visit on Thursday.

The mayor replied saying the council would only be too glad to help the board in the good work and appointed Councillors Atkins and Shantz a committee to work with the board of trade committee.

The Park By-Law was then brought forward and received its first and second reading and ordered advertised.
